Inn on Ferry Street - Detroit, MI

Freshwater Future is hosting a symposium focusing on being prepared for the realities of climate change in local communities. EcoAdapt, a national leader in assisting communities to prepare for climate change, will be presenting information and assisting groups in taking climate change realities into consideration in community projects and decision-making. The Climate Symposium will help you learn about climate change, how climate change may impact your community and water resources, and how you can develop projects and take steps to mitigate these impacts.
